NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

HAY BAY.

The frequent changes we have had from Indian summer to zero weather humps up most everybody, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wagar and daughter Stella were the guests of Mr. Newton Parks on Sunday last.

Mr. Adam Parks, of Michigan, is home at present. He has bought a farm near Belleville and intends taking his family there to live.

Mr. Will. Hambly, of Macdonald, spent Sunday with Mr. J. F. Parks.

The weather proved good on Friday night last and the Xmas tree at the Sand Hill church passed off very successfully. The programme was good and the tree loaded down with costly you much and shall always retain presents. The nastor Mr. McEachern agreeable memories of our pleasant as they can now use the money realized to purchase a library. Rev. F. D. Woodcock filled the chair in his usual pleasant and genial manner. This Sabbath school was organized last June, and this is its first Christmas tree. Next year they hope to make the entertainment surpass this one.

All who received your Xmas Annual are delighted with it. Your subscribers wish you many happy returns of the season.

SELBY.

The anniversary services of the Methodist church were held as announced, and were most successful. The sermons by I. Carman were of a high order. Th. one on holiness in the order. The one on holiness in the morning no stone unturned, and was decla i by the vast assembly present to e by far the best they ever heard. It to was most excellent. The speaking by Revs. H. C. Garbutt and Dr. Tuckers, as also the music by the choir was first-class, and justified all that Rey Mr. Stratters all that Rev. Mr. Stratton announced in his bill. In addition to the above Mr. Limon, of Michigan, gave two recitations, and Miss Neely two solos in fine style. Proceeds over $100.

Everybody is invited to the Sunday School enterts imports in Machanes.

School entertainment in the Methodist church here on New Year's Night. Don't fail to come. Admission, 15c.

FOREST MILLS.

A very pleasant afternoon was spent in the school house of S. S. No. 14, Richmond, at a public examination held by Miss Helen Demorest. who has aught in this section for three and a half years. The pupils in the various classes acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner, and showed careful training on the part of the teacher. A very nice programme consisting of finusic, dialogues and recitations was rendered by the pupils. The parents expressed themselves pleased with the advancement of the children. Mr. Robt. Sampson. sr., with his great re-source of wit and humor, enlivened the proceedings during the afternoon, and at the close made a good speech. Before the singing of the National Anthem Miss Carrie Winter presented Miss Demorest with a very handsome diustrated bible and Alice Winter read the following address.

Miss Helen Demorest—Your many friends having heard with deep regret of your intended departure, desire to express their appreciation of you in some tangible manner. We have learned to esteem you as a christian friend and teacher. As a christian you have taught the pupils both by precept and example, that the acquire-ment of worldly knowledge should not be the height of their ambition, that be the height of their ambition, that this life with its fleeting pleasures is not all, that there is a higher, nobler life to be attained to. As a friend you have been kind and true and have striven to impress upon our memories the true principle of living. As a teacher you have been zealous in your efforts to promote the best interests of the pupils under your charge. During your sojourn of three and a half years you have striven to inculcate the principles of true moralty into the youth of this section and we hope the in-fluence of this teaching will have a good effect upon them. We shall miss good effect upon them. We shall miss you much and shall always retain MMARY CONV-ICTIONS.

lox and Addington for the Quarter ending the 11th day of Dec. 1894.

Miss Emma Scott, of Napanee, was visiting at Mr. Ezra Huffman's for the past few days. She attended the Christmas tree.

Quite a number of our young people attended the "Gates of Zarr" at the Methodist church, Deseronto.

WILTON.

The Christmas tree in connection with the Methodist Sabbath School on Christmas eve was well attended, the hall being well filled and the proceeds $24. The progamme was good, consisting of duets, instrumental and vocal choruses, dialogues, and recitations by the young people. Rev. Mr. Coombe filled the chair very accepta-

A public examination was held at the school Friday afternoon. A large number attended and was very much pleased with the exercises of the afternoon and the prompt answers of the pupils. The scholars presented their teacher, Mr. N. A. Asselstine with a very pretty arm-chair. Mr. Asselstine is leaving the school which is much regretted, as during his stay of over four years in the school, he has done excellent work.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Gallagher are visiting friends in Wilton and vicin-ity: Mrs. Rose Shibley, Ladies' College, Kaston, is spending her holidays with her parents; Mr. William Jordan and family, of Campbellford, are ting at Mr. Thomas Mills'; Miss Gertrude Lucas, Sydenham, has bein visiting her aunt, Mrs. Burt; Mrs. Joyce and Miss Eliza Joyce, at R. The election of school trustees took place to-day, Mr. J. McConnell and Mr. Robert Pybus, being the candidates. Mr. Pybus was elected by 20 of a majority. Everything passed off quietly, for which everyone was thankful. There has been to much turbulence and strife in this village during the past week or two, so that everybody was getting disgusted. Let us each and every one, (we are all human) practice more charity, liberality, and kindness towards each other.

Miss Carscallen, of Newburgh, visiting her brother, James Carscallen. We are sorry to hear Mr. Carscallen's two little girls are quite ill.

Mrs. Sexsmith is still very poorly. She does not recover as her friends would like to see her.

Mr. Bergmann is the father of a fine baby boy.

Mr. Robert Madden is home from Minnesota, visiting his family.

Mrs. Miller, of Napanee, is the guest of Mrs. Miller, of this village.

Christmas passed very quietly here. The church of England entertainment came off Saturday evening last. There was a full house, the proceeds amount ng to about $25. Everyone present considered the programme good Mr. Ho per, president of the committee, Mr. Richards, Superintendent, together with those who assisted, deserve great credit for the manner in which the children were trained. FALL ON THE FARM, Agricultural Fairs-The Food of Stock Seed Corn.

It is doubtful if any farmer has a sul-It is doubtful it any farmer has a sufficiency of manure for all of his crops and the failure to use fertilizers liberally causes them a loss. Leaving aside the question of the superiority of manure carrillians the regist in the manure of the superiority of manure carrillians. or fertilizers, the point is how much manure is on the farm. Plants must have food, and if the farmer is too economical in the purchase of fertilizers he may save too much in that direction and lose much more by not supplying his crops with the needed plant foods.

It will be an advantage to every farmer to visit the agricultural fairs in order to keep well informed in regard to the many new implements and machinery that are invented every year. It is important to use the best laborsaving appliances.

The profits depend on the condition in the field is left after the crop is removed: If the crop has been a large one, the land may be poorer than before, and this loss of fertility lessens the profit, as a larger amount of manure or fertilizer must be applied next season. It is difficult to arrive at a correct knowledge of the profit derived in a single year, but with the keeping of strict ac-counts something should be known in three years. If the yields decrease the farmer should not hesitate to procure fertilizers if his manure heap is small.

Ground wheat, when used with cooked turnips, carrots, or small potatoes, will induce rapid gain in stock. Varity of feed is also necessary in order to pro-mote the thrift of the animals. Keep Varity of them in good appetite.

The seed corn for next year cannot be too dry. Let the select ears remain on the stalks until the leaves turn yellow and the kernels are hard and dry, then hang the ears up in a dry place.

The frequent advice that workingmen in the cities should go on the farms is not always good. The city resident would make but little progress with the plow, cultivator and at milking and doing chores. He could learn, but the farmer will not employ any but experienced persons if he can avoid it, as too much personal supervision is required, Yet the farmers are seldom supplied with experienced help.

The fruit market was not overstecked with choice fruit this year, and good prices were obtained despite the dall times and low wages.

NOVEL HEROINES OF TO-DAY.

Far Superfor to Their Predecessers of Half a Century Ago,

Half a Century Age.

There is no greater indication of the advancement of the day than the women one meets in the novels he reads, says The Philadelphia Call. To be sure, one meets with many women in novels who are coarse beyond description and undoubtedly belong to a class to which he would not introduce his mother or sister, and from contact with whom he would decidedly preier to keep his wife, but, then, one unfortu ately meets them everywhere. Besides, these are not the true heroines—they are merely creatures who have been raised to a fictious value for the moment by reason of some prevailing fad, and have managed to loist themselves upon respectable society, just as it not uncommonly happens in real life. But the woman we mean is strong and true and good. She is by no means the namby-pamby creature of healf a century ago. She does not sit and fold her hands, disdaining to lift so much as her handkerchief, nor does she faint at the sight of blood like "a broken lily on the stem," nor have to be helped over every stone that is more than two inches in diameter. And her appetite! If she had no other virtue her appetite would be her saving grace. She eats three good square meals a day and enjoys them, and, if necessary, is he devours a fourth without a tinge of shame rising to her cheek. A few years ago our heroines were all slender and languid, pale and ethereal, delicate and helpless. A spider would this we were supposed to admit, with their "long, yellow A spider would throw them into a mt, a cut finger cause them to faint. And these are the women we were supposed to admire, with their "long, yellow curls" and sweet, "amiable" faces. All this indicates most clearly a decided change in the opinions of man. Men may deny it and women may flout the idea, but the fact remains that men form idea, but the fact remains that men form the characters of the women around them for more than the reverse.

How Bullets Are Caught

is c whil with the of t wich writ I sai

The Boston Post says: Speaker of the bullet-catching trick in particular, Prof. F. D. Hewes, who is also a dealer in the art mystic, said yesterdays: "There are literally but few tricks in magic. The sop-called new ones present-ed to the public from time to time by leading magiclans, conjurges or whatmagic. The sop-camen new once present ed to the public from time to time by leading magicians, conjurers, or whatever they call themselves, are simply the revival of some old experiments clothed in new form. The catching of bullets is not by any means a new trick, for it is almost as old as magic itself. I remember seeing the old 'Faigir of Ava' perform the same trick, only in a different manner, when I was a small boy. The catching of the bullet is easily explained. In the first place, to accomplish it, the conjurer must procure an old-style caplock, smooth-bore musket, some powder, caps and a leaden bullet. All these must be perfectly free from any deception. Now we come to the ramrod. Therein lies the whole mystery of the trick. It is constructed with a small metalic tube closwe come to the ramrod. Therein des the whole mystery of the trick. It is con-structed with a small metalic tube clos-ed at one end and so arranged as to become detached from the end of the ram-ed at one end and so arranged as to become detached from the end of the ramrod as well.

"Having explained the construction of all the appliances we now proceed to do the trick. The gan, bullet, powder, and caps are freely given for examination. The performer requests some one to put the charge of powder into the gan. Next he inserts a small piece of paper and sams it down, and by a twist of the ramrod to the left the small metal tube is dislodged from the point and remains within the gan barrel. Now the bullet is marked and placed in the gan by one of the audience: again the professor rams it down. Now, by a contrary twist, the metal tube becomes fast to the tamrod, so that in withdrawing it the bullet is removed.

so that in withdrawing it the ounce is removed.

"The professor now palms the marked builet and all that remains to doe is to go through the motions of catching it when the gun is discharged, and the spectators are thoroughly mystified. You see, it is all very simple when you know how."

IN GANANOQUE in future all persons who are heard swearing on the public streets will be prosecuted. It wouldn't be a bad idea for the town council of Napanee to take this into their serious consideration. A similiar regulation here might be fruitful of good results.

According to Mackenzie Bowell the National Policy is still the great panacea for all the ills that afflict Canada. Under it he will lead the old brigade to certain Waterloo. Sir John Thompson recognized that the old policy had outlived its usefulness and under what was termed a lopping off of the mouldering branches an attempt at a re-adjustment of the tariff was made but the influence of the manufacturer proved too strong and it ended in a miserable flasco. On the question of tariff reform the Liberals and the Patrons are a unit and in many other respects their platforms are almost identical. If the Patrons are honestly desirous of securing a reduction of the tariff they will not nominate candi-dates in constiuencies where Liberals have a priority claim and a moderately sure chance of winning over the conservatives if the fight is not a triang-ular one. We are well aware that the Patron leaders are just now asserting that the Partons will seek no affilia-tion with other of the old parties, but it would be well for them to remember that this was not what was represented to the farmers by the organizers of the Order. It was stated by them that the Patrons had no intention of forming a third party, but would give their support to the candidates of either of the old parties who would agree to honestly endeavor to secure the reforms that the Patrons demanded. The Liberal party has all along fought the battles of the farmer. Hon. Wilfrid Laurier has said that if it came to a question between the interests of the manufacturer and that of the farmer he would sacrifice the manufacturer every time. We are anxious for tar-iff reform and we do not care whether it is brought about through the agency of the Patrons or the Reformers, so long as it is brought about. But it can easily be perceived that with three candidates in the field, and the Patron and Reformer advocating for tariff reform the election of the high tariff candidate would be assured. By splitting up the vote in constituencies where they have not the ghost of a show of winning, with three candidates in the field, the Patrons would be playing into the hands of the Tories and might bring about what they least desire, the return of the present corrupt Government.

For telephoning in Stockholm and to places within a radius of 50 miles from that city the subscriber for an Ericsson telephone does not pay a cent over the annual fee, but for telephoning over a longer distance an extra fee is demanded. This fee is very moderate. For instance, a three-minute conversation between the cities of Malmo and Sollefted—a distance about twice the distance between Detroit and Chicago—costs only 27 cents and six cents extra for every exceeding minute. Connections from the Stockholm General Telephone Company's net to the Government telephone net and vice versa are made all over Sweden, for which a small charge of only 23 cents is demanded.

The State is a competitor for telephone patronage. From 1877 to 1889 telephone service was developed through private enterprise. However, from 1889 things changed. The Government then by means of the board of telegraphs commenced to compete vigorously with the private lines by laying the interurban double-wired lines between the most important towns and places and by urban double-wired lines between the most important towns and places and by the purchase of private networks. The State telephone has developed to an enormous degree and replaced many of the afore-mentioned telephone clubs or telephone companies. These, notwith-standing their merits concerning telephony, have generally been handcapped by very considerable faults and disadvantages, chiefly caused by the want of unanimity when building and managing the lines.

In spite of the higher fee charged for Inspite of the higher fee charged for State telephone intercommunication, it has therefore generally been found to be more profitable to allow the State telephone to assume the whole. The Diet, notwithstanding the great importance of this new means of communication, has generously granted large appropriations to the State telephone. The central and southern parts of the kingdom are already connected by doublewired lines. In the north many such connections are made and are being still further extended and completed.

At the close of the year 1898 the net-

At the close of the year 1893 the net-work of the State telephone intercom-munication included 255 central and district stations, the combined length of the wires being more than 17,000 miles. The number of apparatus in use is about 14,000, of which 500 were at the stations and the balance used by the subscribers.

Among the private companies there can be no, doubt that the Stockholm General Telephone Company occupies the very foremost position. Its central station is the largest and best arranged in the world. Originally intended for 7. in the world. Originally intended for 7, 000 lines, it can now, in consequence of certain alterations, open as many as 11, 000 lines. July 1, 1894, the company had 9,727 subscribers. The total length of private telephones wires at the same time was about 28,000 miles, with 480 centrals and 17,800 apparatus. Thus in the entire realm there were more than 44,600 miles of telephone connections, 685 central and district stations, and 31,000 telephone apparatus in use.

Notwithstanding the low fees charged from subscribers the Stockholm General Telephone company is able to pay a large annual dividend to its shareholders, many of whom are among the most prominent men in the kingdom. Engineer H. T. Cedergren is the director general of the company. He is favorably known within telephone circles in the United States, having twice visited this country.

Ping-Yang, in Northern Corea, the place where the great battle of Sept. 15 was faught, was the first "litergry center" in the peninsular kingdom. Its chief author was an ancester of Coffucius named Kishi, who, gathering up his writing materials and leaving China in 1122 B.C., entigrated eastward into Corean regions. There is a note concerning "Pickwick" in The English Church Times which will interest the Dickens lover. It which will interest the Dickens lover. It is contributed by a gentleman who, while making a purchase, fell-into talk with the shopkeeper and discovered that the latter was the son of the proprietor of the Great White Horse Inn at Ipswich. "I was on the alert in a moment," writes the traveler. "'It was there, I said, that Mr. Pickwick went after Jingle, after leaving Bury.' It was, sir.' 'And it is quite clear,' I went on, that for some reason Dickens did not like the White Horse, for he slates it right and left.' 'Dickens,' was the reply, 'did his best to ruin the house, but he really made its fortune. Hundreds of people have been there to see but he really made its fortune. Hundreds of people have been there to see it after reading about it. But I can tell yon a curious thing about it. It was Dickens' own mistake about going into the wrong bedroom. There is a sort of triangle on the top of the stairs, and there are two doors just alike, and he went in where some people were in and there are two doors just alike, and he went in where some people were in bed, and they roared out at him, and he bolted all in confusion. He went on to tell me that the room is still called Mr. Pickwick's room, and that it is 'No. 16.' That same evening in the coffee room of the Angel we met a party, one member of which was known to me as a literary pharater and he told one member of which was known to me as a literary character, and he told us that they had just come from Ipswich, and that they had been to the Great White Horse, and he had slept in Mr. Pickwick's room. 'No. 16?' said I. 'The very one,' was the answer. Of course, after that I read to my little party that same evening the adventure with the middle-aged lady with the curl papers, and most exhilarating was the laughter which it produced."

commerce and make the Russians its beneficiaries. In twelve or thirteen days it will carry goods from the Baltic for Vladivostok, as against the six or eight weeks now required.—The tea and silks of China would go west via the Siberian Railway rather than by way of the Suez Canal or around the Cape. The railway will, moreover, vitalize the resources of vast regions now torpid for want of communications. The empire is wanting in arteries of commerce. It has but 29,000 miles for railroad. Its navigable streams are numerous, but by reason of extremes of heat and cold they are navigable, as a rule, only in the spring and autumn. The Black Sea may be shocked by Turkey or England. The rivers of Siberia emptying into the Arctic Ocean are practically of no value for transportation except in their upper courses, and, for part of the year. The isolation of vast areas of Siberia practically destroys their great value for purposes of a griculture and mining. With better means of communication population would in Russia flow east, just as in the United States the construction of the trancontinental lines caused it to flow west. The natural resources are there; accessibility will bring them speedy development. Alrendy the lannual product of gold and silver in Siberia is very large, though its production is made expensive from want of modern means of transportation, but with the building of the Siberian Railway the product will probably be much increased. The wealth of the region to be traversed in iron, coal, salt and precious stones is well known,—Baltimore Sug.

A correspondent says it is now on the cards that Lord Charles Beresford, or "Condor Charlie," as he is more often condor charme, as he is more often called, in recognition of his gallantry at the Bombardment of Alexandria, will soon visit Canada and the United States, the non-soon visit Canada and to and for a double reason. One reason, and in itself a sufficient one, is that he wants to see the two the other reason is of a more one, is that he wants to see the two countries. The other renson is of a more practical sort. It is a fact not openly placarded, but a fact, none the less, that England is watching with interest the development of the American navy—its ships, its dynamite guns, against which, it is claimed no ships after ships, its dynamite good, ships it is claimed, no ships can furnish adequate it is claimed, no ships affort can furnish adequate defence, and its vastly improved equipment of armored cruisers.

There is probably not a more capable or enterprising officer in the British may than Lord-Charles Beresford. He knows how to navigate a ship as well as knows how to put on a uniform—perhaps a triffe better.

It is a somewhat reculiar fact, but a a trifle better.

It is a somewhat peculiar fact, but a fact none the less, that the chief menor perhaps it would be well to say the best men in the English army—the Duke of Cambridge always excepted, are Irish, Lord Walcoley is an Irish and Iris Lord Wolseley is an Irishman. Lord Roberts, the little "Bobs Bahadur" of Rudyard Kipling's delightful Mulvaney Ortheris and Learnyd stories in "Soldiers Three" and other sketches. is an Irishman of Irishman or Ortheris and Learnyd stories in "Soldiers Three" and other sketches, is an Irishman, and from Waterford, in the south of Ireland, where every pensant knows all about the little Lord who marched from Cabul to Candahar to save an English garrison, and who is rated by men who know all about such things to be the best general at the command of Her Gracious Majesty, the Queen, and Lord Charles Beresford is also an Irishman, and strangely enough, or naturally enough, as you may chough, or naturally enough, as you may choose to put it, he comes from the part of Ireland that produced Lords Wolseley and Roberts-Waterford, near the Kil-kenny border.

There may or there may not be an-other occasion when Lord Charles will be called upon to show, the stuff that is in him, as he did at Alexandria—but that.

him, as he did at Alexandria—but that, to quote Mr. Kipling, is another story.
Lord Charles was born in Dublin, though of a Waterford family, in 1846, and in his early days was known both as a said dog and a member of the set of the Prince, of Wales, incidentally he was perhaps famous as the best amateur boxer in England.

prince of perhaps famous as the best amaxeur of in England.

In Waterford and Kilkenny the "Mad Beresfords" are well known as being ducling sportsmen, who never refused a chainence or a hedge when they had a good piece of horseffesh under them. They were and are Irishmen such as Charles Lever wrote of. The brother of Lord Charles is an officer in the English army, and was in service in South Africa during the Zulu trouble. While scouting in the Zulu trouble. While scouting and was in service in south Arried during the Zulu trouble. While scouting, or perhaps taking tobervations, Capt. Beresford was surprised by an outguard of the Zulus. There was a private soldier with him, and almost at the first throw of the Zulu's spear the private was and under his tawny mustache Dick Beresford swore an oath that the Recording Angel has probably wiped out before this. It was a simple, manyl oath. The bedamaned if I do."

Til be damaned if I do."

Lord Charles is a trifle older then his brother, but they are very like.

There is hardly an old foxy in the English navy who likes Lord Charles Beresford. There has been and is, a sort of nayal ring against which Lord Charles Beresford has waged steady and persistent war, though he is a Conservative in solities. Probably more than any man in England he has exposed the corruption politics. Probably more than any man in England he has exposed the corruption that obtains in English naval circles. Mr. Gladstane, Liberal in politics though he is, was always slow to in any manner curtail the powers or privileges of the Queen. Lord Charles Beresford, Conservative and friend of the Prince of Wales, has taken a different stand. He has in and out of season held that every man who knows the fact must hold, that inferior navy of France gets English warships in the Mewiteranean sea, then English prestige will receive a set back such as it has not had since 1812 and the couple of years that followed. Lord Charles Berseford is one of the few men who see the drift of the times and the possibilities of a good navy. He knows a ship from stem to stern, and is sound in theory and prompt in practice.

Eyery Canadian knows Charles Beresford through his supero handling of the little gunbout Condor at the bombard-ment of Alexandria. Frederick Villiers, the famous war correspondent of The London Graphic, who was on the Condor, London Graphic, who was on the Condor, told me the story of the fight, and it was like young blood in an old man's veins to hear it.

Lord Charles was ordered by his admiral to stay out of the heavy fighting, as he did not consider the Condor big enough to stand the heavy guns of the forts at Alexandria. Mr. Villiers told me that the Irish commander of the Condor-cried with rage and vexation when the order was signalled to him from the flagship.

with rage and vexation when the order was signalled to him from the flagship. I less than an hour afterward he did that which would have ceused his court martial and disgrace if he had not work martial and disgrace if he had not work the district of the fire of the fertic and while the big buildogs of the English Navy were booming out large noises as buildogs will, he silenced the guns of the Egyptians. But, after all, every man loves pluck and gameness. The American sailors on the yards of the American vessels in the Alexandria Bay cheered, and the sailors on the English ships, who like a good fight, for or against them, did the same. Even the English admiral, who should have ordered his subordinate under arrest, ran up the signal:

dered his subordinate under arrest, ran up the signal:

"Well done, Condor,"

When Lord Charles went aboard the flagship his superior officer swore at him softly and then cried over him, and then told him he was "A damued brave blackguard, just as I would like a of mine to be."

There have been more classical and scholarly things written and said.

scholarly things written and said, perhaps the English admiral said he meant, and some men nowadays are afraid to do that.

The course of promotion is slow in the English navy. There are no wars now and naval officers as a rule do not commit suicide. It was not until after his famous feat at Alexandria that Lord Charles Beresford was made a captain.

Prior to this he had acted as a com-Prior to was ne mad access as com-mander. Beres-ford was in immediate command of the ford was in immediate command of the machine guns at Abu Kles, and his luck was with him there, for he was the only man in charge of the guns who was not killed.

Lord Charles was elected a member of Parliament from Waterford in 1874, but very seldom appeared in the House, as he was usually on mayal duty. In 1880, under the wave of Liberalism or the opposition of the Irish supporters of Mr. cliadstone, Lord. Charles lost his seat, in 1885 he won it back again and holds it yet. Premier Salisbury, who rather admires the aggressive Irishman, named him as a Lord of the Admiralty in 1888, and then came a stirring of dry and useless bones in the English navy. He mercilessly expused frauds and humbugs.

In the wildest and lonliest portion of the west, seventy-five miles north-west of Meeker, where, in 1879, the Utes massacred the Meeker family and every one at the agency, is the most wonderful cattle ranch in the world. Within a space five miles in length and three miles in width roams a herd upon whose sides the branding iron has never been placed, and around whose horns the lariat has hever tightened. But a score, or even fewer, of them have ever seen a man or horse or other animal of their kind, and, in fact, their kin, except at a distance of nearly 600 feet high above them. The Ute Indians stall them "p'check-up," or red buffalb. And yet if an Indian who has seen them should be asked about it, he would laugh and sheke his head, and all the Information obtainable would be: "P'check-up," ear red; no ketch 'em." There are more than a thousand of this herd, and yet no man owns them: nor is there a man, white would be seen the entered on her here to come colored who has even been colored who has even the seen and who has even them and who has the seen and the second of the sec In the wildest and lonliest por owns them; nor is there a man, white or black or copper colored, who had ever been able to possess a single hoof of these fat and tempting bleeves.

The cattle are in a prison. Out of it is one method of escape, but to travel that road means death to the adventuris one method of escape, but to travei that road means death to the adventurous one. There is no way to get in except it be by use of a rope a thousand feet in length, As the Indians say: "Heap see 'em; no ketchum; no come away." On the two long sides of the oblong space in which these cattle roam rise precipitous and even concave rocks for 500 and 600 feet—yawning black and insurmountable. At either end secthes and rushes the Yampa or Bear River. For miles above and miles below it plunges, and stumbles on in its headlong haste to reach the arms of its parent, the scarcely less tumultuous, but deeper Green River. Like the wonderful flat top mountain of Colorado, this home of the imprisoned herd has no likeness in the world. It recalls in its inaccesibility the marvelous stories of the valley of verdure into which Mayne Reid's adventurers only found their way by the assistance of the balloon. the balloon,

A few of those who had been the blindest followers of Lee, the Mormon fiend incarnate, whose hands were red with the blood of women and children, found in their wandering a pretty valley or stream which flows from the Wasatch range into the Green River. They struck their stakes, built their camp fires, and during the night their sagacious leader had a vision which told him there to stay. They could hardly have chosen in all Utah a more fertile or more isolated spot. They called it Ashley, and shout them have since gathered more of their sect, until, where the refugees posted their pickets on the lonely nichts, of the first summer, has grown a thriving village. STORY OF THE STAMPEDE.

It is a tenet of the Danites that robbing or theft from a Gentile is no crime. So it was thought to be only a cunning trick when John Wyckliffe, one of the Mormon settlers of the new town, and his three sons made a night sortie on Henry's Ford in Wyomang, and carried away 800 head of cattle ranging there. This was in 1874. The owners of the cattle discovered their loss a few days after they were gone and started in pursuit. The Wyckliffe's had their friends along the trail and were warned by signals of the coming of the pursuing party. Accordingly they drove the cattle as It is a tenet of the Danites that rob-

The thieves and the stolen herd had reached a mess of inviting grass at sundown one day and halted to camp for the night. A terrific storm arose. The lightning flashed incessantly and the thunder pealed and cracked with unintermitting fury. The four men desperately held the terror stricken cattle by riding around them constantly and chanting some weird tune. But the furious storm excited the brutes beyond measure. They surged and ballowed, every moment growing less subbellowed, every moment growing less subject to control. All at once, as if by one

A stampede of cattle by day is calculated to strike terror to any hears lest there should be some human being in the pathway. #### SWEPT ON TO DEATH.

John Wyckliffe and his sons met their the amid the lightning's glare and the stampeding herd. Instead, they and their horses were swept on, and driven, in the terror to escape the charge of the maddened animals, over the brink of the awful precipice which froms up from the waters of the Bear. After them plunged the whole fright-crazed herd, and down to the bottom of the fearful fall cont horses riders and herned creatures.

down to the bottom of the fearful fall went horses, riders and horned creatures. Out of this plunge of life, to what was semingly certain death for all, a few of the herd were not killed. Those which had gone ahead formed a cushion of death. Mained, stunned, but still invested with a spark of life, when the dread storm was over the living cattle crawled out from the mass beneath them and formed a nucleus for the herd which now roam from the mass beneath them and formed a nucleus for the herd which now roam at wills within their rocky confines. On the bank of the river, stretching back a few hundred yards grow, succulent grasses and upon this the cattle have propagated and thrived. In looking over the edge of the precipice one can see that they are small and as wild and agile as deer. They have been shot at to see the effect, and have carned to regard the appearance of a man, whether Indian or white, as a menace from which they flee, clambering over rocks and through underbrush in the chase to a point of concealment. How the North German Squires, Called Junkers, Sustain Their Dignity on a Peasant's Wages

FOUR BUT ARISTOCKATIC.

If you would learn how to make small If you would learn how to make small means go far, study the ways of the North German squires, the Junkers, has they are called. Among them domestic geonomy is become quite a fine art, and how to make two shillings do the work of three is held a feat to be proud of. The camiest of Scotchmen is a veritable prodigal compared with the latter-day Junker. Junker.

Junker.

I once spent a month in a colony of Junkers. It was a little health resort perched high up on the side of a mountain, with pine forests all around. The chief attraction of the place for its German visitors is that, as it lies beyond the ken of price-raising tourists, the cost of living there is almost nil. One can stay in the village for weeks for what one must give in Toronto for a single bonnet. There was quite an aristocratic commust give in Toronto for a single bonnet. There was quite an aristocratic com-bony assembled there that autum, some twenty Junkers+a graf, three grafins, barons and baronesses, all with high-sounding names and coa's of arms with many quarterings. Some of them had held office at Court, and still kept up re-thitlons with ouite mighty respongages. some or trem much beld office at Court, and still kept up relations with quite mighty personages; while the others had been deharred from enjoying like privileges only by sheer luck of money. For they were all more or less in poverty, such poverty as is unknown to English gentlefolk. One baron had an income of $150 a year; another must live, and for the best of reasons, on $175; while a third who was regarded as quite a wealthy individual, had $750 a year wherewith to support a large family—in a historic castle too. One noble dame provided food for herself, her husband, and five children on $4 a week; another boasted that she never spent more than $2.50 a week on her house-keeping. A Freifraulein who went to Court from time to time declared that her allownace for clothes was $50 a year; her allownace for clothes was $50 a year; and she had a friend who dressed, and quite nicely too, she said, on half that sum. "I could manage quite well if it were not for shoes," a golden-haired little baroness confessed. "Oh, I do so wish I could ge bare-foot." The Junkers have no false shame

The Junkers have no false shame with regard to their poverty, on the contrary, they speak about it, even to a stranger, in the most open fashion. I once heard a beautiful, stately old lady announce, in a large company, that she had foresworn afternoon coffee—the thing she loved best on earth—as she really could not afford to spend twopence a day on a luxury. Junkers have h unryelous power of shutting their eyes to the realities of life; but even they are at length alive to the fact that every new year as it comes finds them poorer than the year it comes finds them poorer than the year before. What little they have is in farming land, and in North Germany, as elsewhere, such land is decreasing in value. "We are all going down in the world," one old gentleman informed me: "it is only Jows and traders nowadays who have money." And, when I inquired whether nothing could be done to bring about a better state of things, he shook his head despairingly. He flashed shook his head despairingly. He flashed unutterable scorn upon me, though, when I ventured to remark that Junkers would I ventured to remark that Junkers would have to follow the example of their English conferes, and take to trade. The mere suggestion of such a thing was resented almost as an insult. Yet to an outsider, it seemed less dignified for them to pass their lives pinching and saving just to keep body and soul together, than to try to earn a few honest pennies by trading, or even by shoe-blacking.

trading, or even by shoe-blacking.

No civilized people anywhere are quite so hopelessly out of touch with their times as these North German Junkers. They are a charming race, in some respects, kindly and courteous, with quaint old-fashioned ways that are most attractive. A waft of lavender and other sweet smelling herbs seems to cling about, not seek their cluthes, but their ideas. They only their clothes, but their ideas. They are the veriest Rip van Winkles: to hear hem talk one would think they had been them talk one would think they had been tast asleep for a hundred years at least. They shrug their shoulders when the Beichstag is mentioned, and yow they really cannot understand why all this fuss should be made about the masses. For them the world is divided into two great classes, the "yons," i.e., the aristocracy, and the "none-yons;" and they are morally convinced that the latter were created for the express purpose of manured lands, or on land to which themselves without cost, as with but little expense. The views of Hensel cannot be given fully on a limited space, but the above is presented for consideration of those interested.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

STONE MEAL SAID TO BE SUPERIOR TO FERTILIZERS.

Plenty of the Raw Material-A Condensed Statement of the Propositions Urged by Herr Hensel, the German Chemist-Agricultural News and Miscellany.

A German chemist, Herr Hensel, has startled the European farmers by the nold claim that stone meal (natural rocks ground to minute fineness) is surocks ground to minute fineness) is su-perior to all other substances as a fer-tilizer, and he even attacks the use of manure and fertilizers as being the sources of nearly all diseases among the human family as well as among animals. Although his theory is not accepted by many, and is yet to be given greater tests, it is not out of place to present his views for the information of those who may be interested. It may be stated. who may be interested. It may be stated, also, that he has succeeded in attracting the attention of the leading agricultural associations of Germany to his theory, and tests have also corroborated his claims, stone meal having given better results than manure or artificial ferti-

ELEMENTS OF THE ROCKS.

Hensel claims (as is well known) that the disintegrated primary rocks contain more or less of potash, soda, lime, magnesia, iron, phosphoric acid, sulphuric acid, chlorine, fluorine, silica and alumina and that our soils are composed of such, the earthly material from the primary rocks, associated with gypsum and lime, in combination with water and the atmosphere, under the influence of the warmth and light of the sun, producing the plants which nourish man and beast. He states that the ashes of plants show about as much potash and soda as lime and magnesia, and that potash and soda are not only inter-changeable but may also be replaced in most plants to a considerable extent by lime and magnesia, which new theory he proves by witnesses who have tested for the purpose of demonstrating it as a fact. He also asserts that hydro-car-bons, through the adjunction of earth and ammonia, become albumen, and that albumen easily undergoes a change into fat, as may be seen in cheese, and as the meat of the ham passes into fat.

NITROGEN UNNECESSARY

It may be a further surprise to be informed that it is unnecessary to apply nitrogen in any form to the soil, but Hensel asserts that nitrogen in the form of carbonate is injurious to plants, and is unnecessary in the soil if the soil contains a sufficiency of fixed basic substances (alkalies and alkaline earths), as plants will easily procure the needed nitrogen from the atmosphere. He refutes the supposition that stone meal is not soluble by referring to the use of silica by plants, which is one of the most in oluble substances entering into the composition of plants, yet there is no plant food which is more partiful, or more easily appropriated by plants, than silica and there is not a root, a stem, a leat, or fluit which does not contain silicie acid.

STONE MEAL PLENTIFUL.

It is claimed by Hensel that if farmrs, instead of removing their stones and rocks, will gaind them to an impulpable powder, by heating the rocks and then breaking them so as to easily grind them, will apply from 500 to 1000 pounds per acre (or more), thus adding to the original soil, the crops will be more abundant and of better quality than when fertilizers are used, while the cost when fertilizers are used, while the cost will be much less. As these substances are plentiful they are within the reach of all. He admits that farmers will receive his theory (which, however, he relaims is not a theory, but a fact) with doubt, but he calls upon them to test it for themselves on a small plot, by the side of manured lanes, or on land to which wetlikers here there continued and spring.

A NEW IDEA IN FARMING. be obtained by raising them or paying high prices for them.

A small greenhouse or hotbed will afford many luxuries in winter. In some sections tomatoes are printed in deep hotbeds, covered with glass in spring, the hotbeds being covered on the approach of cold weather. A few plants thus treated keep up a late supply.

Since the public tests made at Chicago, in butter production, with the selected cows of Guernseys, Jerseys and Shorthorns, the private tests have not given such enormous productions. The public tests demonstrated that there were limits beyond which cattle of the breeds named could not pass, and that the previous claims of enormous productions could rightly be doubted as due to tion could rightly be doubted as due to error or improper management. We no longer have claims of 30 and 40 pounds of butter produced in one week from those breeds.

Lord Derby on Canada.

Lord Derby, in addressing a meeting the Manchester Geographical Society or the Manenester Geographical Society one evening a fortnight ago, said Can-ada had, with a wise and liberal judg-ment, opened her arms to immigrants of any country, of almost any class, and without any distinction of race or creed, any country, of almost any class, and without any distinction of race or creed, provided only they came with the intention of becoming law-abiding citizens. Every evidence pointed to her solid and steady progress, which, on the opening of other tryde and commercial routes, might be still further developed. The climate was very much like our own, only a little more so. The cold weather was dry and healthy to persons of reasonable habit of body, and it rarely precluded outdoor employment, while it was seldom that labor had to be suspended in consequence of heat. To all who thought of emigrating to Canada he would say they would find themselves among people like themselves—keen in business, well educated, and well acquainted with all the latest modern developments of science, with universities in no way inferior to our own, and living in a community where poverty was practically unknown. For those who were willing to take moderate pains, he believed there was in Canada a field open for legitimate speculation and pushing of commercial enterprise to which sure for legitimate speculation and pushing of commercial enterprise to which practically the globe could offer no rival.

The bucks drove Se-ne-jaho and the woman away. After weeks of outlawry, often pursued and clinging to an existence of terror, the young buck and his squaw determined that they would seek the cattle valley which the Indians call the "Lower Earth," and try to find access. Once there they could dwell in peace, and would be rich in possession of hundreds of animals, the flesh of which they could eat, while from the skins they could make their clothes and a tepey. They tried a score of ways in which to gain access. Descent was death. The rapids of the river was the only course. The buck patiently made a dugout from a log and paddle from a limb. Twelve miles above they launched the rude craft, themselves lashed in it, and went whirling and shooting on downward. When they emerged from the dark walls into the opening which they had hoped would be their impregnable refuge, the dugout was bottom up and already splintered by contact with a thousand pagges of the resistless current two lifeless and bruised bodies. ed bodies.

The Strength of Different Materials.

The Strength of Deferent Materials.

Some comparisons of an important practical character, in their bearing upon engineering construction, have recently been made by Prof. Thurston. From these it appears that cast-iron weighs 444 pounds to the cubic foot, and as inch square bar will sustain a weight of 16,500 pounds; bronze, weight 525 pounds, with a tenacity of 38,500 ; wrought iron, weight 480 pounds, with a tenacity of 50,000; aluminum, weight 168 spunds, tenacity 26,000. Singular enough, if equal weights of metals and wood be compared, it is found that several varieties of wood are stouter than ordinary sicel. Thus a bar of pine just as heavy sas, but no heavier than, a bar of steel an inch square, will hold up 125,000 pounds, the best ash 175,000, and some hemlock 200,000, but the bulkiness of wood is a great objection. The tenacity of the best steel castings made for the United States navy is given as from 65,000 to 75,000 pounds to the square inch. By solidifying such castings under great pressure double that tensile strength has been reached. been reached.

A Letter of Thanks

Our tenth year of business in Napanee closes with 1894, and 1895 begins a new We thank our customers for the fact that those ten years have placed us in control of the largest retail business within a radius of one hundred miles, and trust that in each of the next ten every reader will find success and happiness.

We are pardonably proud of the fact that while the closing year has been marked by general business disaster, and the best houses find a shrinkage in their volume of trade we can again repeat our claim of the largest year's business in our history. Our business for 1894 has been materially larger than for any previous year. We think our clean, safe and economical system and sincere hard work deserve some of the credit for this, and we also think they can be depended on to accomplish much more. As you know, each year of sound success adds to our power to serve you well. Larger selling means larger and closer buying, and more economy in handling goods. Our business is conducted on methods which win everywhere if properly used,

Common Sense should be used in at tempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in impurities in the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

scientific medical cure for inebrity and scientific medical cure for incorry and the opium habit discloses the appaling facts that a large percentage of the pa-tients applying for treatment are wo-men. Further inquiry by The Boston Transcript shows that housekeepers and Transcript shows that housekeepers and those employed in various branches of labor constitute a great number of these unfortunate beings, whaseslives are wrecked by continuous indulgence in narcotics. Those who have spent years in studying, this subject agree that the victims in nearly every case have begun with drugs, merely to ease a temporary pain and have realized when it was too late that the halut had become established. A farmer's wife become established. A farmer's wife finds herself a sufferer from periodical sick headaches; a society woman on the yerge of nervous collapse; a brain worker unequal to the task she has undertaken. A small dose of become established morphine, a third of a grain of quinine, a drink of alcohol in one of the many forms, even to Florida water and per-fumery, is a quick but dangerous stimu-lant. The next day, at the same hour, the same remedy is at hand, and before many weeks the victim is chained to the habit. This particularly true of the drugs, which have none of the social temptations of liquor drinking. There is no pleasure in taking drugs, and those who continue to do so confess when cured the horrible indescrible agony, both mental and physical, of attempts to do without it. Three grains of mor-phine are generally considered a fatal dose, yet many women who apply for treatment are taking enough every day dose, yet many women who apply for treatment are taking enough every day to kill 50 persons.

One of the most distressing phases of the drug habit is its effect on the moral sense of its victim. Investigators are authority for the statement that women—and of course men as well—are absolutely untruthful, even regarding the most trivial affairs, when they have acquired the habit. In this particular, opium is much more to be dreaded than liquor. The intensity of the craving is most horrible to witness, as was shown by a secent instance. A woman was arrested on some minor charge and locked up. She sent to a friend to bring her her accustomed dose of opium. Instead of removing the cork, which would have taken but an instant, she clutched the bottle tightly instant, she clutched the bottle tightly between her hands and tossed broken glass and powder into her mouth. Then her calmness returned. Those who know confirmed opium eaters believe the would walk barefooted over live coals or face any horrors for the sake of coans or race any norrors for the sake of appearing their craving. So saturated does the body become after years of opium eating that its crystals exude through the skin and about the joints. through the skin and about the joints. Those 'who use the hyporemic needle are enabled to take much larger quantities than by swallowing the powder. The desire for any of these drugs and also for liquor is periodical, and the scientific cure, which has proved so successful, combats this regular swing of the nervous pendulum by rythmical treatment. treatment.

A Condition

Kate-I don't think men are so bad as some women would have them.

Ruth—I don't know about that. Some women would have them a good deal worse than they are."
